Interview #4

Note: For the first time in this series, I am going to be interviewing a female reader of mine, Jessica. Enjoy.

Marius: Tell us a bit about yourself.

Jessica: I'm a 26-year-old Cali girl. Student by day, barmaid by night. I love dancing at clubs and hanging out with my friends when I am not working. I am currently studying law and I am hoping to work as a judge advocate one day. Either that or become a law enforcement officer with the police.

Marius: How did you find our website?

Jessica: My friend Tim sent it to me. He wanted to see if he could trust your advice.

Marius: Based on our past correspondences, I can tell you have a lot of experience with dating and men. So here are two questions for you. 1) What kind of guys do you like? 2) Would you call yourself a player?

Jessica: I love dark-skinned men who are built. Give me a confident man with strong, experienced hands that can make me feel good and I will drool. I don't much care for nice guys. I am too busy having fun and enjoying my life to waste my time with little boys. If you're boring, don't call me.

I don't think I am a player though. I got over that a few years ago. Guys are just too easy to play. It's not worth my time to play.

Marius: Do guys hit on you all the time?

Jessica: Every day. I work at a bar so I get a lot of attention at work. It gets old sometimes but I guess I shouldn't be complaining as long as they keep the tips coming. A job is a job.

I get hit on a lot at school too. Unfortunately I am not looking for a schoolboy. Most of them are young and have no idea what a woman wants. They were fun when I was 19 but not when I am 26.

Marius: By your standards, what does a man has to do to get your attention?

Jessica: He has to be distinctive. I am not looking for the average guy. I am looking for a real man, and those are hard to find.

Marius: Define a “real man”.

Jessica: It’s hard to describe. It’s just a feeling you get when you meet a guy. It’s the energy he carries around with him. Some guys can just walk into a room and make you immediately think, “He’s sexy!” A real man stands out from the crowd.

Marius: All right. So suppose you meet a “sexy man” you would like to meet. What do you do?

Jessica: I would give him eye contact. If he’s a real man, he’ll know what to do next.

Marius: That shows a lot of confidence on your part. But how about when a guy approaches you first? What do you do then? Since you work at a bar, I’m sure you’ve heard plenty of pickup lines. How do you handle those?

Jessica: I don't like them. If you want to meet me, just say what you want to say.

Marius: As in approach you directly?

Jessica: Yes. But don’t throw me any lines. Be subtle. Besides, I have to be attracted to you before I will even think about doing anything with you.

Marius: But how will you know if you’re attracted to the person?

Jessica: Oh. Believe me. I will know within seconds.

Marius: What if you don't like the person?

Jessica: Then I'll let you know and you better not push it. I hate guys that are annoying and too persistent.

Marius: But a little bit of persistence is good?

Jessica: Well, yes and no. I will probably be flattered, but I still won't date you.

Marius: So you think you have all the power.

Jessica: Lol. I can see where this is going. No, I don't think I have all the power. If you're a guy I actually like, then I will see you as my equal.

Marius: Okay. Let's say a guy has passed the initial test and got your phone number. He calls and asks for a date. What do you do?

Jessica: I will go out with him and see if he's as interesting as he is attractive physically.

Marius: What kind of things do you look for?

Jessica: Independence, intelligence, and ambition.

Marius: Like a rich guy?

Jessica: No, not a rich guy. I am not looking for money. I probably make more money than most guys. I have made like 400 bucks in one night with my tips alone. I don't need a sugar daddy. I can take care of myself, thank you. I want someone who can capture my imagination.

Marius: Do you meet these guys often?

Jessica: Not really. Most guys don't even know what they want to do in life.

Marius: You must be tired of college boys. Are you looking to get settled down?

Jessica: Not yet. I am enjoying life too much to settle down. I don't feel my biological clock yet. I want to focus on school and on my future career. I don't have a lot of time in my schedule to date right now, so if I date a person he better be worth my time. I am not going to play around with some kid who doesn't know anything.

Marius: So you're a career girl.

Jessica: No. I am a 21st century girl. I do whatever I want.

Marius: But what if you meet the right guy?

Jessica: Then it's a different story.

Marius: Are you dating anyone right now?

Jessica: Yes.

Marius: How long was your longest relationship?

Jessica: 2 years.

Marius: What happened?

Jessica: I grew up. He didn't.

Marius: All right, Jessica. Tell me the biggest mistake that men have made while dating you in the past.

Jessica: Hmm. I would say being too dependent on me.

Marius: You mean "wimpy".

Jessica: No, the guys that are considered "wimpy" in your teachings, I wouldn't even date them in the first place. I am talking about guys that seem to be really cool and confident when you first date them...but after awhile they become more and more clingy.

Marius: Can you give us a few examples?

Jessica: It's hard to explain.

Marius: Come on, just one example.

Jessica: Well there's a guy who was a very successful entrepreneur. I got into a relationship with him and two weeks later he started acting like a jerk. He called me a whore on the phone. I knew he was kidding, but I was so pissed that I stopped talking to him. He kept calling until I finally picked up the phone. He apologized and said I was "unlike anyone he has dated before". That was the turning point of the relationship. I don't know what was wrong in his mind, but after that incident he started to act really clingy. He came to my work. He tried to get me to take shifts off to go for dinner with him. He offered to pay my student loans. He wanted me to move in with him. I couldn't take it. He had become a whole different person.

Marius: Was he the only rich guy you had dated?

Jessica: No. I had dated a couple.

Marius: So you do love money.

Jessica: Of course I do. But I didn't date them because of their money. Nothing upsets me more than being called a whore. I don't like making money off men.

Marius: All right. Let's dig into this psychology. You're a barmaid, and you accept tips from guys. But yet you don't like making money off men.

Jessica: Yes, but that's different. There are no emotions involved in a bar. But when I date a guy I want to actually like him.

Marius: No emotions for your customers? Really. Let's talk about this more. I am sure a lot of my readers would love to learn how to pick up barmaids. So are you saying that you have no emotions for your customers...like you will never date one?

Jessica: I try to keep things professional while I am at work. But if I meet the right guy while I am working, then there's nothing wrong with that.

Marius: But how will guys know if you're interested? How do they know if you're really rejecting them...or if you're just saying "no" because the boss is around?

Jessica: Oh. Believe me. If I am interested, I will let you know.

Marius: But you could be working for your tips.

Jessica: Let's just say...if I do give you my phone number, then I am probably interested.

Marius: How about the "boss" issue?

Jessica: If I am really interested in seeing you, I will sneak it to you somehow. But if I don't, it means I am not interested.

Marius: What if you're too shy?

Jessica: If I were shy, I wouldn't be working at a bar.

Marius: Good point. All right, Jessica. Let's talk about my Smart Dating System a bit. I've sent you a complimentary copy. What do you think of it?

Jessica: I like it. You make dating sound so simple, and everything you mention is so true. I laughed quite a few times as I was reading it...especially when I saw that picture with the guy hanging onto a cliff.

Marius: If one of my students goes to your work tonight and uses my system to make an approach on you, will he have a chance?

Jessica: Well, it will depend on how well he executes the approach.

Marius: If he does everything perfectly?

Jessica: Then yes, I would probably be interested in getting to know him more.

Marius: How about after?

Jessica: It depends. I may go out for lunch with him to see what kind of guy he is.

Marius: Okay. Here's a big question. I have shown you some of the flame mails I have got in the past. Do you think I teach guys how to be "jerks"?

Jessica: No. Actually, it's one of the reasons why I am okay with your philosophy. You don't try to get guys to act like jerks. Tim had emailed me a couple of other ebooks he bought at the past and they all tell guys to be cocky and act like they are studmuffins. I don't like that. That's what stupid college boys do, and when they meet a hotter woman, they will run away with tails between their legs.

Marius: But you just said stupid college boys always run away from you with their tails between their legs. That sounds like something a man-hating feminist would say.

Jessica: No. Give me a man I respect and I will grow old with him - if he's the right guy. It's all about that triangle thingy you show at the beginning. I really like that triangle. And being a challenge is different than being a jerk. I like a man who's a challenge, not a little boy who tries to be a jerk.

Marius: What do you think of the teasing and flirting techniques that I teach?

Jessica: They are good...but you should remind your readers that their energy is even more important. If you don't have the right type of vibe, no matter what you do, I am still not going to be interested.

Marius: So basically they have to be able to communicate with you at a sexual level.

Jessica: Yes. And that involves “everything”. Your voice tone, your body language...your everything.

Marius: And if a guy doesn't have all of that, he won't get very far with you?

Jessica: No, he won't.

Marius: Will you give him your “bitch-shield”?

Jessica: Lol. I don't have a bitch-shield, silly. Unless I am with my friends.

Marius: Great. That's another topic right there. Why do women tend to put up bitch-shields more often when they are with other women?

Jessica: Girl power. Competition among ourselves. We're showing off to our friends when we scare these boys away. Oh that would be a good topic for one of your books, actually. How women act when they are in groups.

Marius: That's a very good idea.

Well Jess, that's all the time we have for today. I would like to thank you for your time to email and to chat with me. I am sure our readers will appreciate this interview.

Jessica: No problem babe. Thanks for getting Tim a girl by the way! I thought the guy would die a virgin. =)
